

The world has moved on while St. Agnes and GWUH nurses are still waiting.

In 2023, both hospitals voted to unionize with NNU and DCNA, an NNU-affiliate.

Days since St. Agnes' vote: Over 800

Days since George Washington University Hospital's vote: Over 900*

While the world has changed, these nurses have been stuck in limbo with:

No union-negotiated pay increases

No benefit improvements

Ongoing uncertainty

Zero problems solved

Two-plus years. One strike. And nurses are still waiting.
Is unionizing worth the wait?

* St. Agnes nurses voted in a union election on November 2–3, 2023, to be represented by National Nurses United (NNU).

 GWUH nurses voted in a union election on July 1, 2023, to be represented by the District of Columbia Nurses Association (DCNA), an NNU affiliate.
